Start time: 10am

Dear members and guests,

The Keighley Association of Engineers is pleased to announce a December event in our 2018 syllabus, a fully guided visit around Calderdale Industrial Museum. This visit is being put on especially for us and is one not to miss. We will pay the entrance fee of £5.00 for each member who attends – guests are welcome but will be charged the entrance fee of £5.00

Re-opened and now run by a group of volunteer enthusiasts who believe that the industrial heritage of Calderdale should be preserved and shared with everyone. This special museum houses static and fully working original machines together with many special and rare artifacts relating to the industrial heritage of Calderdale.

Gathered together over a number of years this special collection represents a cross section of the wide variety of industries that developed in Calderdale. Some of the machines are the only surviving examples of their type in the country. Several machines are in working order and, where possible, will be demonstrated for short periods during opening hours. Every effort has been made to present the machines as they would have been when first used. The collection covers the last 250 years from the industrial revolution.

Situated near to Halifax railway station and the famous Eureka children's museum, and next door to the newly renovated Piece Hall, the new central Library and Archive, and Square Chapel, Calderdale Industrial Museum is well placed in the centre of Halifax's growing 'cultural quarter'.

Access is to the side of the Museum via our newly installed ramp and stairs, internally there are stairs and a lift to all floors. Meet there at 10.00 am.

Disabled Parking is available by prior request.
